Considering a leave of absence from your studies?

When considering taking a leave of absence from your studies (a “study break”) at Lund University, you must first consider the potential effects on your migration status in Sweden. Any residence permit for studies is directly linked to you being an active student in Sweden. If you are granted a leave of absence from Lund University, your residence permit for studies may be revoked by the Migration Agency.

Even if your residence permit isn’t revoked, it’s important to remember that a leave of absence from your studies may lead to problems when applying for an extension on your residence permit later on. A leave of absence doesn’t provide any exemption or relief from the standard requirements for an extension, meaning for example that the credit requirement will be the same regardless of you having studied or not during that time.

Please know that Lund University has an obligation to notify the Migration Agency of your leave of absence from studies immediately after it’s approved.

For any questions, please contact migration@er.lu.se.
